

The last steam day

SUNDAY saw the last steam day of the year for Combe Steam Mill.

The Grade II-listed building is the original power house for Blenheim Palace. The open day of the working industrial museum gave visitors an insight into the behind-the-scenes work that has gone on in past centuries in the Blenheim Estate.

People could ask Combe Mill Society members questions about the machinery they operated and see the old steam mill in action.

Order No. 191008970

Picture: Antony Moore